Dedication

With respect and admiration for his untiring zeal and steady courage in times of stress, we, who reap the benefits of his devotion, dedicate this 1955 Aurola to the President of our Board of Trustees,

Dr. Arthur C. Christie

Foreword

Realizing that we shall soon leave American University, and desiring to retain in concrete form impressions of those "days that we treasure," we, the Class of '34, have published this 1933 Aucoia.

American University

ONE of the finest things about American University is its campus. An eminently admirable setting for the joys and sorrows, the studious labors and indolent pleasures of our college life, the campus holds a place peculiarly its own in the affections of every one of us. It is the purpose of the 1935 AUCOLA to furnish a partial record, written and pictorial, of our lives here.

To that end, views of the buildings with which we have become thoroughly familiar, photographs of our professors and classmates, accounts of our athletic contests, and articles on the organizations of which we have been members, have all been included in the yearbook. Then, to add just a bit to the pride with which an A. Uite will think of his alma mater when perusing this volume, we have featured an element of A. U. life usually slighted—the campus itself.

Our faculty embodies an unparalleled combination of technical skill with interest in the welfare of individual students. A. U. alumni are thankful to be able to declare that their professors assisted in their spiritual as well as mental development. These are acknowledged facts, and we do, at least partially, appreciate them.

When we think of our student body, we again, without being boastful, feel blessed. A securely-founded institution, with fine religious affiliations and a location in the nation's capital, American University naturally attracts students of high mental caliber and good mental fiber.

nd the A. U. Campus

In the field of athletics, we find reason for satisfaction. Under the leadership of a fine coach, our school, in spite of its size, has made an enviable name for itself in basketball. Our football teams, although less successful, have been noted for their gameness and team play.

Activities other than athletics also supply cause for gratification. Our record in debating defies comparison. In two years of intense competition with the outstanding schools of the United States, we have suffered only one defeat. In addition we vanquished Oxford. The dramatic productions, especially the Shakespearean, have attracted considerable favorable attention. Both the EAGLE and the AUCOLA have won honors in journalistic contests. Likewise, in the activities of academic and social organizations, students have found pleasure and profit.

With this record before it, the staff of the 1955 AUCOLA decided that only a theme intimately connected with the University would be satisfactory. Too, the staff thought that this theme deserved more appreciation than it has hitherto received. Thus it is that the 1955 AUCOLA features the AMERICAN UNIVERSITY CAMPUS.

Class History

NOW that the Juniors, the class of 1934, have almost completed three-fourths of their college careers, it might be well for them to pause momentarily to look back at the history of their achievements and perhaps to draw some lessons from the mistakes of the past. For the most critical period of their entire college

Sophomore Class

IN the fall of 1932, the men and women of the class of '35 came back to American University determined, through class spirit and willingness, to play according to depression rules and to make acceptable history by earnest study, a fighting attitude in athletics, good fellowship in social pursuits, a burning enthusiasm for the job in hand, and great excitement over a bright prospect for the future.

The class elected Gordon Sievers president, Ann Henderson vice-president, Lucile MacDonald secretary, and Louis Heiss treasurer. Miss Henderson and Mr. Heiss had already served in their respective offices as Freshmen. Miss MacDonald did not return to A. U. for the second semester. The vacancy thus created was filled by the election of Margaret Moses.

Undoubtedly one of the most important tasks of the Sophomore class was the assimilation of the Freshmen into the A. U. student body. This they accomplished with eclat. Ed Still, Chairman of the Freshman Rules Enforcement Committee, with kindness but with firmness, put our Freshman "raw material" into the proper co-operative frame of mind. To climax their pedagogic efforts, the Sophs defeated the babes on Field Day in all but one event, the result of experience and maturity, perhaps.

Probably the Sophomores' outstanding achievement was the annexation of the inter-class basketball championship. The class of '35 won all its games and placed three out of five on the mythical all-class team. In addition to athletes, the class contributed outstanding participants in Dramat, in debate, in the activities of the social and academic organizations, and in the journalistic endeavors of the Eagle and the AUCOLA. To top all else, this class led in the number of honor students. The class of '35 should certainly continue a great force on the campus of American University.

Freshman Class

THIS year's phenomenal freshman class has achieved a record in the accomplishment of unheard-of feats, such as marching around the campus chanting praises to Allah, getting its picture in the paper, and making money on a dance.

The Big Brother and Big Sister party, intended to introduce the college to the freshmen, really gave the freshmen an opportunity to present their clarion voiced Eddie Hopper to the college through the medium of a one-man melodrama. The same evening, they received the exquisite green identification tags which hung delicately from their necks for the next month. This period was climaxed by a stupendous funeral for the ornaments, at which time the mournful freshmen wailed their now-famous chant. A photograph of this sad ceremony appeared in the Washington Daily News.

The football and basketball teams were each augmented by the services of a number of the members of the Class of '36. When Dramat wanted a leading lady and The Eagle needed two more members for the editorial board, freshmen filled these positions.

One of the outstanding achievements of the class was in the field of philanthropy.

During the Community Chest campaign, it not only made the largest total gift of any class, but contributed far the largest amount per capita.

The class chose as officers, Edward Hopper, president; Mary Lesta Wakeman, vice president; Catharine Church, secretary; Melvin Wheatley, treasurer; and Harold Warner, student council representative.

Their officers finally installed, the freshmen settled down to their greatest undertaking, the Saint Patrick's Dance. Features of this function which contributed to the amazement of upper classmen were: extensive advertising, a check room, a ten piece orchestra, a healthy profit, and decorations which actually disguised the gym.

It is rumored that the class will develop a cure for the depression next year.

Athletics

So we are here, setting up on this hill, as upon a high pedestal, once more the compass of human life with its great needle pointing steadily at the lodestar of the human spirit. Let men who wish to know come and look upon this compass and thereafter determine which way they will go!

—President Woodrow Wilson at the Opening of the American University.

Athletic Progress

THE past year marks an important development in athletics at American University. Ever since the founding of the college, there has been the difficulty that is ever present with a small institution, that of securing wholesome relationships with other institutions with similar ideals and approximately equal strength. A distinct effort has been made here to keep athletics in their proper place with regard to the entire college program. Then and then only may modern athletics be free from criticism. This year a small group of colleges having similar problems and ideals have organized so as better to foster the relationships that have been developed over the past few years. The organization has been named officially The Chesapeake Athletic Conference, and at the present time is composed of four institutions: Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon, Lynchburg, and American University.

The formation of this group marks the successful effort on the part of American University to secure wholesome competition year after year with desirable institutions. This is important when we look to the future, since interest of students and alumni alike depends on natural rivalries that have been developed through years of competition. When we consider that nearly every college in this conference has been on the schedule of American University for the past three years, then we may appreciate the fact that already there is a fine spirit of competition existing between the various institutions. There is now no reason why this spirit may not be continued and developed in a manner that will bring forth the finest feeling of loyalty and responsibility to the college.

Our athletic progress here at American University has been slow in the past few years, particularly in football. But this is no reason for becoming discouraged concerning the future outlook. It is true that during the past year the football team was not particularly successful, although it did succeed in winning two games and scored more points for the season than did our opponents. But in the final game of the season, the team performed brilliantly against Randolph-Macon, a team that for the past two years has been at the top of the Virginia Conference. If the men returning for the season of 1933 can bring back with the team the same fire and dash that marked their efforts in that game, then the season of 1933 will mark a vast improvement over former years.

For the past two years the basketball team has made a record for itself which is unequalled in this section of the country. There have been twenty-seven wins in thirty-one games. When we consider that in all but very few of these games the opposing teams represented much larger student bodies, then we realize how imposing this record is. But this year marks the loss of several men who for the past four years have been the backbone of the team. Next season awaits us, therefore, with a greater problem than has before been presented. But we may take courage in the fact that already development is being made and that what is lost in experience is being regained by added effort on the part of those whose responsibility it is to carry on.—WALTER H. YOUNG.

Football

Any review of the 1932 football season is highly satisfying. When the squad reported in early Fall, there was a team, almost intact from the previous year, and plenty of new material. The outlook from the start was subject for controversy. But prospects were favorable, particularly after the return of Targee, a veteran from former seasons, and the discovery of McLendon and Clarke, who, though new to the campus, proved formidable.

The first game of the season, with Hampden-Sydney, showed that a revitalized football team was representing A. U. Particularly after the start of the second period did the Eagles put forth their strength, scored three touchdowns, and for the rest of the game more than held their own against a stronger opponent. This contest conclusively showed that an improved team was to represent the alma mater.

Then, in the second game, was the true strength of the team fully exhibited. Bridgewater College was the victim of a 33-0 defeat, largely through the sterling efforts of Eddie Parke, kicker extraordinary and plunging fullback. Here at last was the first victory since 1930, and what a victory!

Next in order was Bluefield College from West Virginia, and the over-preponderance of bulk on the visitor's side forced the home boys to come out on the short end of a 19-6 score. The annual Homecoming Game with Shepherd gave little more than reason for rejoicing, because for some inexplicable reason the A. U-ites could not function; and a nip and tuck second half failed to equal a two-touchdown lead of the visitors.

But revenge was sweet, for the second victory of the season was gained over Galaudet, an outclassed, yet fighting team. Quarterback Borsari was the spark for the home team and the end was inevitable—a 26 to 0 win for A. U.

In the final and most impressive game of the season, the 1932 football team exhibited its true worth. Playing the 1931 champions of the Virginia Conference from Randolph-Macon College, the Eagle eleven played a superlative game. In the first five minutes of play the only touchdown of the opponents was registered, and from then to the final whistle both teams were on the defensive, with the home boys holding a slight edge. It was a fitting climax to the 1932 football schedule.

During the course of the season the Eagles lost four games and won two, and for the entire campaign scored 82 points to 68 for the opponents. Any mention of a particular player as a star would not be in order, for the entire squad revealed a remarkable spirit of cooperation that carried it through the most successful period in several years.

By graduation A. U. will lose a number of valuable men: Bowers, A. Buffington, R. Buffington, A. Johnson, H. Johnson, Larson, Parke, and Weeks. Thus will the number be sadly depleted, but for the coming season, here's hoping!

Basketball

CONTINUING their excellent play of preceding years, the basketball team of 1933 equaled the record of the previous season and added more well-earned victories to the column. The student body is sincerely grateful to the team and to Coach Young for this commendable showing.

In the opening game, the Eagles from A. U. displayed at the outset the type of basketball they were capable of playing. Maryland State Normal was a victim of a 32-16 defeat, and from that time the story has remained practically the same for the other engagements.

The second triumph of the season was scored over Hampden-Sydney in a thoroughly satisfying game in which the invaders were put down by a 31-20 score.

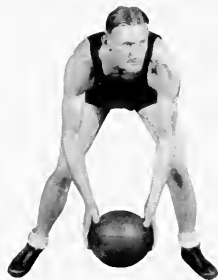

Swinging into the South, Virginia Medical College was easily defeated by the fast passing and accurate shooting team from A. U., 49-19. On the same trip Hampden-Sydney was again successfully vanquished to the tune of a 28-27 score, though only after Kessler made a spectacular last-minute shot.

Then came the big game with Navy—the first loss of the season was inflicted on the Eagles after a gamely-fought encounter with the boys at Annapolis. Though out-classed from the start, the team functioned well, but lost, 39-24. It is gratifying to note that A. U. gave Navy the stiffest competition in all the games the Sailors played.

Undisturbed by the defeat at the hands of the Naval Academy, the Youngmen registered a 26-18 victory in a hard-fought game with the St. John's quint of Annapolis, and Bridgewater afforded little opposition until the Junior Varsity was substituted, the final tally indicating another victory, 27-22.

Randolph-Macon, always a trouble-maker for the Eagles, administered the only other defeat of the season when the team made its second tour of Virginia. A last minute spurt of the Jackets gave them the victory, 29-27. Gallaudet, the next opponent, was easily subdued, however, and when the game ended the Blues were on the short end of a 29-15 score.

Sweet revenge was obtained when the Eagles defeated Randolph-Macon in the A. U. Gym in one of the most exciting games of the series. Only the whistles decided the final outcome, 32-31, so close was the scoring.

Elon offered little resistance in a 38-13 lacing, and the second game with St. John's was a repetition of the first, for the opponents were put down, 32-26, on the enemy floor.

The remainder of the season was marked by little excitement, for Lynchburg College fell victim to the Eagle attack, 44-25, Bridgewater suffered a like end, 36-20, and the season was rounded out by the 43-31 defeat of Virginia Medical College.

Graduating from American University, this year, are seven members of the basketball squad—seven men whose loss will be felt in the seasons to come. Oscar Sells, Leonel Dick, John Williams, Wayne Larson, Gladstone Williams, Albert Buffington, and Manager Harry Underwood will be gone. Surely many seasons will intervene before a team will be produced that will measure up to the record left by those seven men.

Women's A. Club

ORGANIZED not only as a club for women who have won their sports' letters, but also as an incentive to participation in interclass sports, the "A" Club instigates and sponsors plans and programs for women's athletics.

In the annual Orange and Blue Color-Choosing Ceremony, its first event of the school year, the "A" Club gives all the new women of the college an opportunity to "draw their colors." After the interclass games in each sport have been completed, Orange and Blue teams are made up from the best players on the class teams. These approach, in a sense, varsity teams.

This year, besides the interclass competition in hockey, basketball, volley ball, and soccer, a swimming meet, and archery and tennis tournaments were held. The indoor sports, ping pong and shuffleboard were also given a place in the schedule of contests. Through the Eagle Hockey Club and the Basketball Club, play days and friendly games with other schools and clubs were arranged.

The Club's social program included this year a week-end at Kamp Kahlert on the West River. The season ended with the annual spring banquet, at which new members are received into the Club and awards of letters and fourth year insignia are made.

Interclass Hockey

THE hockey season opened with a game between the seniors and freshmen, the yearlings being defeated by a score of 4-2. Though the juniors were victorious over the sophomores, they suffered a loss under the quick sticks of the seniors. In hopes of winning at least one game, the freshmen worked hard against the sophomores, but only managed to sustain another defeat. Since the juniors forfeited a game to the sophomores, the seniors and sophomores, with shivering bare legs and sweaters fastened high at the neck, met on a cold December day to decide which the winners would be. The few sophomores who turned out for the game played hard, filling two positions at once, but in vain. They were forced to give way to the overpowering ranks of the seniors, captained by Anne King, in the final 6-0 victory.

Archery

ARCHERY continues to be a favorite sport among the women of American University. Braving all types of weather the feminine enthusiasts aimed, day after day, at an elusive target and some really accurate shooting-eyes were developed.

Under the direction of Miss Wulf, these Robin Hoods have attained such proficiency that they consider it an event when one of their number misses the bullseye.

Debate

AMERICAN University's traditionally fine debate reputation was in every way maintained this year. The establishment of a chapter of Delta Sigma Rho last spring served to stimulate the members of the squad to a greater degree than ever before, and as this article went to press, it appeared possible that this year's team might equal, or at least approach, the unbeaten record of the preceding year.

Easily the high spot of the season was the debate held in November with Oxford University on the question of cancellation of the war debts. An overflow crowd descended upon Hurst Hall, and several hundred would-be spectators had to be turned away, an unprecedented event in American University debating history. A colorful audience, which packed the auditorium and even disposed itself in the nearby halls and corridors, included delegations from the British Embassy and the English-Speaking Union, as well as a number of other distinguished personages. Leon Elsberg and Robert Marcus of American University, upholding the negative of the war debts question, earned a 3-0 decision over Messrs. Wilson and Ervine of Oxford after an excellent debate.

Forensic relations were established during the course of the year with several schools not previously met by American University teams, including University of Pennsylvania, Denison, Drew, Wesleyan, and Oberlin. At the same time, colleges with whom American has maintained cordial relations over a long period of years, such as Ohio Wesleyan, New York University, Rutgers, and others, were again included on the schedule. In general, the schedule for the present year presented one of the best-balanced programs ever undertaken by debaters at this institution.

QUESTIONS USED

Resolved, That the United States should agree to the cancellation of all inter-allied debts.

Resolved, That modern advertising is more detrimental than beneficial to the American public.

Delta Sigma Rho

THE American University chapter of Delta Sigma Rho, national honorary forensic society, was established on May 21, 1932. Dr. Henry L. Ewbank of the University of Wisconsin, national president of the society, was present, and directed the installation ceremonies. Speeches were given by Dr. Ewbank, Dr. George B. Woods, and Mr. Donald J. Sherbondy. Miss Louise Feinstein formally welcomed the new chapter on behalf of the George Washington University chapter. In the evening, a formal banquet was given jointly by the American and George Washington University chapters.

Delta Sigma Rho was founded on April 13, 1906, in Chicago. The first chapter was established during the same year at the University of Minnesota. Since then it has grown steadily, and now includes over sixty chapters located at outstanding institutions in all parts of the country. The purpose of the society, according to the preamble of its constitution, is "to encourage sincere public speaking." Membership in the organization is probably the highest honor that can be won in the field of oratory and debating. At American University a prospective member must have engaged in varsity debating over a period of at least two years, participated in at least three intercollegiate debates, and been voted into membership by the chapter.

The establishment of a chapter of the society at American University was a signal recognition of the high debating standards maintained by this institution, since as a general rule no chapter is granted to an institution which has not been regularly represented in forensics over a ten-year period. American University, however, has always had coaches who were members of Delta Sigma Rho, and Delta Sigma Rho men have always acted as judges for debates. In addition, the exceptional record compiled by American University teams, which have won over eighty percent of all decision debates in which they have engaged, could not be overlooked.

Six students and three members of the faculty became charter members of the American University chapter upon its establishment. The students are W. Yule Fisher, Charlotte Magee, Robert H. Marcus, Arthur R. Murphy, W. Earl Masin-cup, and Max Tucker. The faculty members are Hilda Minder French, Dr. George B. Woods, and Mr. Donald J. Sherbondy. Dr. Woods had already been elected to membership in the society by the Northwestern University chapter, while Mrs. French and Mr. Sherbondy are members of the chapter at Ohio Wesleyan University.

YOUR ANNUAL Lead

In working with the AUCOLA Staff for the past year it has been our aim to help produce an annual which is the leader in its class. We hope that we have been successful to the end that, year after year, the advice of each retiring AUCOLA Staff will be
